

The Scottish Centre for Children with Motor Impairments

Outreach Programmes

The Scottish Centre for Children with Motor Impairments is a national centre that receives funding from the Additional Support Needs Division of the Scottish Government. We think it's important that our services are as accessible as possible so that any child or young person can benefit, regardless of where in Scotland they live.

At the moment we're building relationships at community level with partner organisations such as local authorities and the NHS. This means that we can begin to offer community-based alternatives to attending the Centre, giving children and families more choice in how to access our services.

Please check back soon for more information on the Outreach Programmes that we can offer.
